

Further consolidation of the broadcast industry is the only logical consequence of changing the current ownership rules. Consolidation has already robbed my area of coverage of local events and news, and more consolidation will only accelerate the loss of quality programming. Besides, the predominant distribution medium for "free" television is already via the cable and satellite systems. Increasing consolidation does nothing to change that business model.